

between Campbell Point and Georgeson Island. Favor the Georgeson Island side. A shoal extends off Campbell Point. Anchorage is possible inside Campbell Point, but tide flats and shallow water extend to the outer end of the long wharf. A restaurant and lodge are on shore. A new resort development offering fractional ownership in ocean cottages recently broke ground here. There is a good swimming beach and a trail to a scenic viewpoint at the end of Campbell Point. The Point and Georgeson Island are part of the Gulf Island National Park Reserve.

★ Campbell Bay (20): This bay is protected from northwest winds, but exposed to southeast winds. There are rocks in line with the Belle Chain and extending southward from Campbell Point to beyond Georgeson Island. Anchor near the head on a mud bottom. There is a popular swimming beach on shore.

★ David Cove (21): Anchorage in this small niche with minimum depth of seven feet. Exposed to the north. Launching ramp.

Walk-around: At low tide, a shore walk can be made from this cove to the Active Pass Light Station, but the walk is rocky and slippery.

Piggott Bay: There is a good swimming beach here, but reefs and southeast winds are hazards.

★ Miners Bay (22): [3473] Fuel, provisions, restaurants, and limited moorage. CANPASS check-in site (Oct. 1 to April 30 open to CANPASS only, May 1 to Sept. 30 open to all). Active Pass has currents to seven knots on spring tides. See Active Pass description in Chapter 10. The northward movement of the flood tide affects the bay. On strong flood tides, with any northerly wind, rips occur from south of Mary Ann Point to Laura Point. Miners Bay is deep, so anchorage must be close to shore. Currents circle around inside the bay. There is a sunken cable west of the public floats. Within walking distance of the floats are the museum, farmers market, library with internet access, art galleries, bakery, and other shops.

★ Village Bay (23): Terminus for the Gulf Islands-Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen ferries. Good mud bottom in 24-40 feet, but ferry wash, northwest winds, and private buoys affect anchorage. Public telephone at terminal. Launching ramp and beach access in bay. Avoid Enterprise Reef. Do not pass between the reef light and the green buoy.
